Qualifications and Volunteer Experience

Please explain why you would like to serve on this particular board, committee, or commission.

I was born and partially raised in Alaska, where I witnessed the consequences of extractive industries on residents and the natural environment. As a millennial, my development has been further informed by the dual crises of climate change and economic precarity. I have been working within the political sphere for all of my adult life, and I believe that change starts at the local level. Municipalities, particularly in California, can provide policy templates for other jurisdictions and government agencies to follow. This is a time when the state is facing serious wildfire risks and ongoing growth of suburban sprawl and I wish to do my part to help protect its natural assets. Richmond is an environmentally diverse jurisdiction, with numerous creeks running through its borders. As a result of environmental racism, heavy pollution, and municipal neglect, local watersheds have been historically overrun with garbage, disrupted and rerouted, and choked with invasive vegetation. But local watersheds can and should be the site of community pride and enjoyment, rather than seen as a public health hazard, an eyesore, or a mere flood risk. Richmond residents deserve even more concerted environmental restoration and protection, and creeks are one place that require significant attention. Richmond does have some successful creek restoration projects to emulate, such as the efforts made around Wildcat Creek, wherein local youth directly participated in revegetation efforts. Urban Tilth has also done a fantastic job with its Basins of Relations program, which trains young people to become Watershed Restoration Technicians. As a county, we should recognize that the need for creek restoration also poses exciting opportunities for skilled employment and building both economic and climate resilience. Given that Richmond resides on a portion of the shoreline, countywide and inter-county collaboration is also particularly important: one municipality's shoreline policy undoubtedly impacts other jurisdictions within the region. The threats of sea level rise and flooding (and, in a similar way, air pollution) necessitate thoughtful regional planning. While the Bay Area Air Quality Management District is not a perfect enforcement mechanism, its existence does provide an important home to air pollution control mechanisms that can be improved upon. The Urban/Wildland interface is a place where human interaction with the natural environment must be particularly mindful, as it poses such risks as biodiversity destruction, wildfires, and the introduction of invasive species. As a California resident for over three decades, I have become keenly aware of the need to responsibly get more proactive about wildfire mitigation. I wish to give my skills and experience to work on these issues. It is necessary that we harden against the coming changes in climate to mitigate the impact. I know that if given the opportunity we can continue moving in the right direction.
