Find Your Park

Accessibility Services and the National Park Service

The National Park Service and the Golden Gate National Parks Conservancy will be presenting an information session focusing on activities and sites that can be enjoyed by persons with disabilities. This informational session will provide persons with disabilities information on where, what and how to access the amazing opportunities that Golden Gate National Recreation Area has to offer.

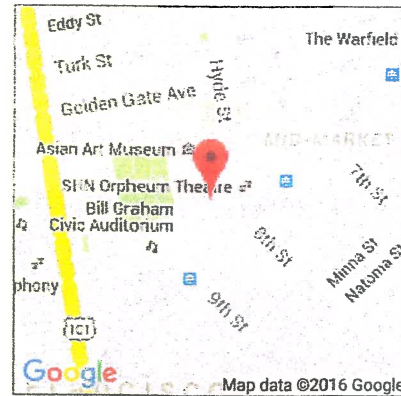

About Find Your Park

The National Park Service is celebrating 100 years in 2016! Part of this year-long celebration is to encourage all Americans to make their own personal connections to public lands and to "Find Your Park."

A park can be different things to different people, and the National Park Service wants everyone to get out and find theirs. #FindYourPark has been making its way around many social media sites and organizations such as Subaru and REI have been promoting people of all ages exploring and experiencing their national parks. From historical sites to outdoor recreation areas, the park service encourages everyone to "Find Your Park" and to enjoy all that the National Park Service has to offer.

CONTRA COSTA

Class tells how to get official records

By CATHERINE HEDGECOCK

PLEASANT HILL — A group of students is learning how to locate government documents during a Saturday morning class at the Pleasant Hill Adult Center.

Joe Partansky of Concord, a public health specialist and former research analyst for the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services, is teaching the four-session class, Accessing All Government Information. Partansky was a member of a committee that drafted an ordinance that expands access to Contra Costa County government meetings and records. The law goes into effect Thursday.

Partansky said he wants to help people who need information from the government. These could include assets forfeiture, Freedom of Information Act requests or First Amendment issues.

In addition, knowing more about how to track down government information can help people become better citizens by keeping tabs on politicians and government officials, he said.

Class participants are learning how government entities work, including city, county, state and federal agencies, international organizations and multijurisdictional agencies. The class includes a field trip to the document collection at the Pleasant Hill main library, and it gives students information on locating government documents from computer on-line services.

"Upon completion of this course, participants will be able to identify and use key telephone information numbers and reference sources, will have enhanced problem-solving skills and be better able to ask the right questions of the right people," Partansky said.

The current class will have its last two sessions from 9:30 a.m. to noon Saturday and March 25. Late registration is available. Another class will begin in May. Cost is $45 for the four-session class. Further information and registration are available from Mt. Diablo Adult Education at 685-7340.
