received an additional $75,000 in 2017/2018 to create early literacy spaces in 12 Contra Costa County libraries.

BACKGROUND: (CONT'D)

The Library will use Sunlight Giving funds to purchase Burgeon (<https://www.burgeongroup.com>) interactive kiosks for five libraries in impacted communities, including Antioch, Concord, El Cerrito, Pinole and San Pablo, as well as additional interactive panels for the kiosks. Smaller libraries unable to accommodate the large kiosks will receive interactive panels to place on shelving end panels. These include libraries in Crockett, El Sobrante, Hercules, Martinez, and Pittsburg. The kiosks provide many early learning opportunities for young children, with panels designed to engage children in activities that improve fine motor skills and brain development. Having these available will maximize the library as a safe place, and bring families into the library to learn and grow.

CONSEQUENCE OF NEGATIVE ACTION:

If the proposal is not approved, the kiosks and interactive panels will not be available in libraries in impacted communities. Children visiting the library will not be exposed to the fun and educational elements of the kiosks.

CHILDREN'S IMPACT STATEMENT:

The Burgeon kiosks and interactive panels meet all five community outcomes established in the Children's Report Card. Research shows that early and positive experiences with books set the stage for a child's success in learning to read. Additionally, literacy skills are a strong predictor of health and employment status. Providing safe, playful and educational spaces in libraries for young children will encourage regular exposure to reading and books, thus improving the quality of life for children and families in impacted communities.
